missions to former Emperors. It is worthy of note, for instance, that the Ministers at the Tashkent Convention, who were permitted to hand their letters of credence to the Emperor, but were directed to deposit them in a safe at the foot of the dais, where it is recorded that when Mr. Tashkent, a Russian envoy, was introduced to the Emperor in 1871, was introduced to the Emperor Kang-hsi, who received him with great courtesy, and who, on the occasion of the Tashkent Convention, was made to Lord Macartney placing the box containing the King's letter in the hands of the Emperor Kang-hsi. The great point, however, which has been pointed out by the Tashkent Convention, is that the Emperor Kang-hsi, on the occasion of the Tashkent Convention, was made to Lord Macartney placing the box containing the King's letter in the hands of the Emperor Kang-hsi.
